Resilient Australia Awards 2024: Social media

The copy below is intended to guide your promotion of the awards across social media. Please use these ideas in conjunction with the promotional graphics included in the state convenor media pack, which are sized for LinkedIn, Twitter and Facebook posts.

The graphics will enable you to tailor content to a target audience within your jurisdiction. In doing so, please consider the following principles:

- Use the campaign hashtag (#RAA24) as well as any relevant trending tags (with discretion). Please avoid using the hashtag #RAA2024
- Facebook and LinkedIn posts should contain more content than Twitter/X and be accompanied by images and media where possible.
- All posts should include a link to the Resilient Australia Awards page on the AIDR website (www.aidr.org.au/raa), where applicants can access the guidelines, browse winning projects from previous years and be directed to the submission platform.

We will use tagging functionality rather than reproducing any logos on social media graphics. Please advise AIDR Awards Coordinator, Juanita Bahl, of your preferred social media pages and handles so we can tag you where appropriate in our posts: raa@aidr.org.au.

NOTE: Award submissions can be made via video. Consider including this detail in your social media messaging.

Resilient Australia Awards 2024: Suggested copy

The copy below is intended to support you in pitching content for relevant newsletters and online news within your jurisdiction (please forward any published clippings so we can promote further where possible). You may also wish to tailor this content for use in electronic direct mail (eDM) target groups, as a personalised encouragement to submit projects.

Suggested messaging

The 2024 Resilient Australia Awards are open for submissions. The awards are celebrating 25 years of highlighting initiatives that build resilience and inspire others to act – making communities safer, more connected and better prepared for disasters and emergencies.

Submissions will be accepted in each state and territory for business, community, government, local government, schools, mental health and wellbeing, and photography award categories. The winners from each jurisdiction will be considered for two national awards, the Resilient Australia National Award, and a new award category, the Resilient Australia National Collaboration and Partnership Award.

This year, the Resilient Australia Awards is also introducing the Research for Impact Award. The new award category is open to tertiary institutions, and recognises research that is having or will have a significant impact on knowledge, capability and practice and will enhance disaster resilience outcomes as a result.

The awards are open to all Australians, including but not limited to individuals, not for profit organisations, small and large businesses, all levels of government, schools, education institutions, research bodies, and emergency service agencies.

The Resilient Australia Awards are managed by the Australian Institute for Disaster Resilience, and proudly sponsored by the Australian Government in conjunction with the states and territories.

Submissions can be made in written or video format and will be accepted until 11.59pm AEST on 31 May 2024. For more information and to submit, visit www.aidr.org.au/raa.
